124. Ken Beckenstein	Yes	1	The problems I'm having with my 17" Studio Display are exactly like those described on the following website: http://homepage.mac.com/wysz/Studio_Display/ . I, too, paid about $1000.00 for my monitor; I, too, got only about two years of use out of it- that's $500.00 per year. The product is niether "better," nor relatively "cheaper;" Mr. Jobs should make ammends, do the right thing and fix these. What about a class action suit?
123. Brian Moore	Yes	0	I' about a year from the blinking light...

Milford | Yes | 1 | I'm signing again, because I've just remembered that the first Apple 17" screen I had needed to be replaced for the same reason. I'm a UK customer and have been quoted £364.14 by Apple for the repair of this screen. After reading this petition there is no way I will pay for this repair and risk it happening again. 17" flatscreens are available new for as little as £200 now. Hugely disappointed with Apple. |

Milford | Yes | 1 | Bottom half of screen dim. Out of warranty. |
| 90. | Guido Henn | Yes | | 21 months old display |
| 89. | Nathan

| 88. | Dave
Caplinger | Yes | 1 | I love my Studio Display, and I don't expect a free repair but more reasonable rates, especially given how common this problem is becoming, would be apreciated. |
| 87. | Jason Ott | Yes | 1 | |
| 86. | Mark
Ellison | Yes | one | Won't be buying another one that's for sure! |
| 85. | Nick Cliffe | Yes | 1 | Thank God I only bought one - I have a studio full of regular Mitsubishi multiscan monitors that perform year after year, faultlessly. I will never buy another flat Mac monitor. |
| 84. | Dirk Bolle | Yes | 1 | 18 montha old, slightly dimmer in lower half of screen, flashing light! |
